Universalism is a theological and philosophical concept that some ideas have universal application or applicability. [citation needed] A community that calls itself universalist may emphasize the universal principles of most religions, and accept others in an inclusive manner. It is centered around the belief in a universal reconciliation between humanity and the divine.

In Buddhism. In Tibetan Buddhism, it refers to pure awareness that is free of conceptual encumbrances, and is contrasted with vijñāna, which is a moment of 'divided knowing'. Entrance to, and progression through the ten stages of Jñāna/Bhūmis, will lead one to complete enlightenment and nirvāṇa. In the Vipassanā tradition of Buddhism there are the following Ājānas according to Mahasi Sayadaw.

The World's Religions can best be described by taking note of what it is not. Author Huston Smith states emphatically that the book is not one of comparative religions. It is as objective a look as possible at the major religions of the world today for the purpose of enlightening people of different cultures and beliefs about each other.

In The Shadows of Glories Past: Jihad for Modern Science in Muslim Societies, 1850 to The Arab Spring, 1st Edition. By John W. Livingston. The title of this volume implies two things: the greatness of the scientific tradition that Muslims had lost, and the power of the West, in whose threatening shadow reformers now labored to modernize in order to defend themselves against those very powers ...

Although each stream looks alike outwardly, they are vastly different. The one on the left is known in our literature as the Sons of Cain. They are full of positive energy and are the craftsmen of the world, the three-messengers, who carve their way through life, rather enjoying the obstacles which they know strengthen the character; they
